USING ONLY a water hose with a second-long (Dagoy) and an axe to keep it afloat, the family of Susan Romero Vidal rescued 14 elderly people who were trapped in a chapel when trapped by the flood. Soak-soaked by Tropical Storm Ondoy.

'Panic' rooms: Now, Provident lives up to its name, clearly

By Nina Calaga

A ROOM with a view it may be. But Antonio Domingo Jr. feels it right on top of his two-story house not really to have a prettier scenery but a better chance of survival.

The businessman had a "panic room" constructed in case another Tropical Storm "Ondoy" whisked 15- to 20-foot floodwaters on the middle-class Provident Village in Marikina City, one of the areas hit hardest by the killer storm exactly a year ago today.

Neighbors have been made aware of his project. The 2 x 10-meter refuge can pack up to 20 people. Inside, a steel cabinet contains the essentials like flash lights, canned goods, clothes and first-aid supplies.

Domingo conceded that, even from outside, the room is inconspicuous and unassuming like an oversized "piggy bank."

But said Domingo takes a break now to function. The room is the family's refuge, position.

Do it Filipino-style, Noynoy urges UN

By Norman Bordabiera

NEW YORK—A day after receiving a $434-million grant from the United States to alleviate poverty and stamp out corruption in the Philippines, President Aquino on Friday called on the United Nations to use Filipino-style people power to push for the development of the world's poor countries.

Mr. Aquino said there was a need to focus on cooperation to achieve the UN Millennium Development Goals that call for reducing poverty and improving better health services and educational systems, among others, particularly in the Third World.

"For so many times in our history, my people have shown that, united, nothing is impossible. We called it People Power," Mr. Aquino said in his address before the UN which General Assembly hall.

"It is my earnest hope, and in the greatest interest of humanity, that we harness the energies of dialogue, solidarity and common responsibility so that a global People Power toward sustainable progress may be achieved," he said.

There were only a handful of delegates present when the President spoke, as many of the more prominent and influential heads of state, like US President Barack Obama, had already addressed the assembly by the time his turn came.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Alberto Romulo said the Philippines had chosen the last Friday afternoon slot when the President had many other things to attend to during his six-day US stay.

After three welcoming the signing of the $434-million assistance compact with the US Millennium Challenge Corp., Mr. Aquino attended a series of meetings with business leaders in New York and San Francisco to invite investors to the Philippines.

Fil-Am youths find way to San Jose, Noy's reforms

By Lisa Gutierrez

SAN FRANCISCO—When President Aquino comes to San Jose, California, to address a Filipino-American gala event at the Tony Palmer Hotel on Saturday another batch of Fil-Am from all over the United States will be gathered at a joint parade to seek a word with him, and to ask him what they can do to help his reform movement.

What Mr. Aquino may find striking is that this group is made up mostly of immigrants, American-born and trained, but very much aware and extremely proud of their heritage as Filipinos.

The afternoon rally at Cow Palace park is part of the annual celebration organized by an Internet-based group, www.filipino.com, headed by "Phil E. Pao."

Exploiting the movement's nationalistic zeal, "Phil E. Pao" said last night including that "if all the Fil-Am in North America were lumped together, our collective GDP (would be) greater than that of the Philippines."

Mother cuts knee-length hair after burying her 3 kids

By Maricel Giron
Inquirer Southern Luzon

DANAO, REZAL—Bosely, Sayaman, 25, is growing out the hair that she had shorn after the buried her three kids.

Her children, the eldest of whom was just 3, would hold on to Sayaman's heels, which reached down to her knees, whenever they walked down the street. It was too painful a reminder that they were all gone, she said.

"Like almost lost her mind, imagine living all poor children," said Sayaman's aunt, Norma Jara, 37. But Jara, too, lost her loved ones—her husband and mother.

At the height of Tropical Storm "Ondoy," Jara looked on helplessly as the surging flood waters knocked down her house and swept her family away.

A year after the tragedy, Jara is staying with 270 other families in a relocation site.

Eco groups observe Coastal Cleanup Day

By Lela B. Salaverda

FOR ENVIRONMENTAL groups, the observance anniversary of the 20th year of the International Coastal Cleanup Day had added significant meaning as it commemorated their country's pioneering experience with Tropical Storm "Ondoy" a year ago.

The Kalamian People's Network for the Environment and the others, whose members have been collecting trash in the country's seashores were involved to highlight the need to take action to prevent flooding, and to ensure the people of the impact of climate change.

Last year, Ondoy brought unprecedented floods that submerged Metro Manila and several other cities, taking thousands of lives and damaging homes and crops.

"Typhoons naturally happen, but we should take care that natural disasters are not enhanced and are caused by activities and policies that allow...wasteful extraction of our natural resources," said Christine Bautista, national coordinator for Kalamian.

PHILIPPINE coastal policy, he added, have diminished the country's sustainable and pollution-free sea.

In a statement, Bautista also said there remains a need for people to understand that the "something" of trash in bodies of water "will come back to haunt them later."

He also said the rivers and coasts in Asia are among the dirtiest in the world. This dismal state is largely due to industrial waste, he added.

In the Philippines, Manila Bay and Laguna de Bay largely serve as "a septic tank," he lamented, adding that the government has failed to resolve this problem.

He called on the people to be more active in protecting the country's natural resources.

Along with the Universidad de Manila Social Work Department, Aquino, Sasaki, and UP Youth for South Atlantic, Philippines (YUSAP) yesterday led activities in cleaning up the shores of Manila Bay along Rockwell Road.

Singapore cites strong trade, investment opportunities in RP

By Herman Eusebio

NEW YORK—Singapore cited strong trade and investment opportunities in the Philippines, Foreign Affairs Secretary Albert Roda said here on Friday after the bilateral meeting between President Aquino and Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Hsien-Lang.

"During the morning, President Aquino emphasized the strengths of the Philippine economy and the many opportunities for trade and investment. These were recognized and welcomed by Prime Minister Lee," said Roda, who was with Mr. Aquino during the meeting.

"It is in this particular context that President Aquino expressed his confidence over the success of the current services negotiations between the Philippines and Singapore which would result in increased tourism flows and investments between the two countries," he added.

Under the expanded bilateral air services pact, Singapore and Philippine carriers will be allowed to fly up to 14 weekly services in and from each other's capitals. These would translate in up to 12 flights a week by Philippine Airlines and Cebu Shuttle on Singapore weekly.

Now present during the meeting were Finance Secretary Cesar Purisima and Trade Secretary Gregory Domingo.

Mr. Aquino thanked Lee for an invitation to visit Singapore. He also thanked Lee for Singapore's grant of scholarships to Filipino to pursue their education in the city state.

In another bilateral meeting at the sidelines of the trilateral Nations Economic Assembly, 2010, Aquino commended Singaporean leaders for their role and complete commitment to the peace process and his determination to realize all our hopes and dreams for peace and binationalism," Bautista added.

in the country's peace negotiations with the secessionist Islamic Liberation Front.

President Aquino extended the invitation in a meeting with Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Hsien-Lang.

President Aquino said the Philippines leader the Philippines was ready to resume the stalled peace process in October. He assured the Malaysian leader of "his clear and complete commitment to the peace process and his determination to realize all our hopes and dreams for peace and binationalism," Bautista added.

Paracetamol declared the only medicine for fever caused by dengue.

THE World Health Organization claimed that Paracetamol does not induce or cause swelling on the stomach lining. Other types of medicine like aspirin or ibuprofen may aggravate gastritis or bleeding.

Parents are advised to watch out for dengue symptoms: nausea, severe headache, vomiting, loss of appetite, abdominal and muscle pain, lightheadedness, restlessness, bleeding of nose and gums. But the most common sign is fever.

So, at the first sign of fever you fear may be caused by dengue, it is advised that you give your child Paracetamol. If symptoms persist, consult your doctor.

Nothing works faster than the Paracetamol in Calpol.

A day in the life of a Filipino judge presiding in a Canadian court

By Delina Gozum
Contributor

VANCOUVER—As a presiding justice of the peace in Toronto, I am waiting for my clerk who is to accompany me to the bail court at 10 a.m.

I take a last look at myself in the mirror, checking that my hair is not disheveled, that my black robes, purchased over English roses, are uncrumpled and properly fastened, and that the glasses such wrapped diagonally across my chest are not visible.

In a few minutes I will be seated on a dais where the attention of the public will be focused on me.

The clerk finishes his run from his office and together we proceed bravely (everybody walks tall here) to the bail courtroom.

Finish on time, please

I ask the clerk how long the list of cases is for the day and the reply is not reassuring. "Should you please finish by 4:30 p.m. or because I have to bring my mother to the hospital?" I answer calmly (filial piety is my virtue of honor). "It depends. Who knows, my dear?"

After this she tells me how many persons are to be bailed: "It's a heavy one, and there have been late cases last night." This means some 14 or 15 persons would have to appear before me in addition to the 35 or 40 persons on the regular list.

I remind myself that there are three grounds that may delay me from presiding full, in accordance with the Criminal Code of Canada, that is, that the accused, if granted bail, may not attend his trial. Second, that there is a substantial likelihood he will reoffend and that I may be compromising the safety of the public. Lastly, that his or her detention may be necessary to maintain confidence in the administration of justice and that the evidence of the charges (the prosecution) is overwhelming.

If the accused satisfies me the three concerns may be alleviated by way of a surety (is the surety a "personable"? who can control him or her or has the moral force and authority to enforce the conditions of the bail, the accused and his surety).

As to the court, the room is not too small, and for the first time or so I am disappointed by the policy violating the spirit provisions of the bail (the police have to then compare the conditions of everyone's bail, and they seem to take everyone's), but so they will be arrested again and jailed if failure to comply with the conditions (bail). In such cases, the officers no longer take the crown—the name of pressing duty for us—do the usual bail hearing or set date.

Comparison with RP

The rules are quite different from those utilized when I was a municipal trial court judge in Iloilo, Pilipinas.

There, all offences are bailable, except when the case involves murder and the evidence of guilt is strong.

Another difference is that bail is taken to ensure that the accused appears in court, in which case, the government has full control on how to use the accused's property.

In Toronto, the justice of the peace

In multicultural Toronto, justices have to be gender-sensitive and politically correct, in addition to being considerate of court workers' needs.

JPMER HENRIETTA COURT JUDGE Delina Gozum, now a justice of the peace in Toronto, Canada, with wife Leticia and their grandson, Carlos.

may allow a person bail on the sole promise of a surety and property is not placed to back the government.

The clerk states as we walk behind to the bail courtroom: "I hope the young offenders' bail court will help us out." Judge's justice of the peace where as in some cases when they are done with their young offenders' bail hearings or set date, which are usually finished early.

Here, it is quite to prefer the court hours beyond 4:30 p.m. If yes, do, what about the medical appointments of some clients? What would happen to their children who are waiting to be picked up from school? What about the safety going home at night? These are questions in review with. So a justice goes beyond that time, but so the is required to so early.

Justice overheard, too

How is the world, I ask myself, could I possibly deal with all of these cases in the time that I have for an ordinary day's work is only from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., considering the lack of institutional resources such as additional courtrooms and judges?

One big task would take the whole day, considering the number of cases and the lengthy questions of the crown (the prosecution), the defense counsel or the case merits, the justice's court, who is assigned by the government to take the oaths for those who have been arrested.

You can limit the questions and the submissions of experts (usually for just one or two of the best hearing in the bail review as one who refused several questions and submissions).

The reason the list has followed me is a necessity: a magistrate's number is because the court does not have an area of a superior court has been made, but so the list is brought before the justice of the peace within 24 hours or so when as possible.

There is also the courtesy (as from the previous day that justice justice had reminded to today's case).

Not all rise in court

I enter the courtroom and the clerk announces: "The court is in session, please stand up."

I then motion them to sit down. Do one session, one or two did not stand up because they said it was contrary to the principles of their organization.

I ask the clerk to bring the case to the courtroom. The clerk then asks the defendant to stand up. The defendant then asks the clerk to bring the case to the courtroom. The clerk then asks the defendant to stand up.

Only persons deemed to be seriously dangerous (those who have been charged with the bail hearing).

Here, too, there is no need for the justice of the peace to ask questions regarding a defendant's competency or sanity, as the court is required to ensure these matters are resolved in open court.

I can see the certified interpreter in the wings ready for action—Filipino, Russian, Tamil, Thai, Korean, Amharic (Ethiopian), Tagalog (Tagalog), Spanish, Portuguese, among others. It is a constitutional right for us accused to have interpreters, free of charge, even if they understood English, or a list of it. So long as the justice of the peace is not served, they will stand up.

Babies and hats allowed

I can see the babies being cared for by their mothers. I am amazed to see: "Please stay outside the court room and pacify the baby." But my threshold of tolerance has become higher over time. My grandchild, Cameron, was here. (And since his crying is much to my ears, I also have to apply the same standard to others, namely, grandchild.) So I hold my little hat and the crying becomes unbearable, then I close the grandchild.

I still remember that day 30 years ago when a witness was being questioned, but few small children standing up and down the furniture in court, screaming for their fathers to come, screaming for their mothers to come. "You may cry then but please be quiet."

So here is the morally or politically correct, especially on bail that a person seems to often refuse to appear in religious grounds in public, a Canadian judge may also refuse to arrest a case.

A justice of the peace was accused because he refused a national grandchild from the courtroom.

HAPPY TIME: Important for court employees as well as the justice. The Gozums, with son-in-law Jeff Del, daughter Rachelle, and of course, two grandsons.

Wage differentials, not poverty, send Pinoy abroad

By Dr. Bernardo M. Villegas
Inquirer.net

ALTHOUGH much of it was just a little more, the reason for leaving the country has been expressed by Filipino students, workers in Hong Kong during the recent housing price boom, and those who have left the country in the past.

They may no longer be representative of the close to 10 million OFWs but they do represent special talents and professional/managerial, and not just the low-income, semi-skilled and unskilled workers.

Placement fees too high

As can be inferred from the recent report released by officials of Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA), many of our overseas workers are definitely not coming from the poorest households of the Philippines. In fact, a study commissioned by the Asian Development Bank (ADB) recently showed that Filipino workers (OFWs) already constituted 11.1 percent of the population of the poor who are only very weakly affected.

What with placement fees and other expenses that can amount to as much as P30,000, there is no way the poor can successfully land a job overseas. It is not justice, then, to say that it is poverty that drives Filipinos to go abroad for employment. It is more accurate to say that it is wage or income differentials that motivate Filipinos to work abroad.

For this reason, we should expect that even if our poverty level should drop to below the poverty line, we will still have millions of Filipinos going abroad for two complementary reasons. These will allow for large wage or income differentials between the Philippines and the more developed economies, and Filipino workers and professionals are in greater demand abroad than most other nationalities. This is because the Philippines is one of the highly developed economies in South America, Europe and North America, and they are currently suffering from the so-called demographic crisis. At least for the next 30 years, whatever the family planning solutions to the Philippines may be, the Philippines will have a surplus of able-bodied workers and professionals, by economic choice, will want to work abroad, at least for a certain period of their lives.

These workers and professionals will be increasingly in the fields of health care, information technology, education, management, engineering, land, sea, and air transport, and other professional services.

Dominance over assistance

In the next 20 years, however, as the Philippines will struggle to develop, it will not be able to avoid sending many of its human resources abroad as low-skilled service workers (OFWs), especially to countries like Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore, Saudi Arabia, and other Middle Eastern countries.

OFWs are sending their children to the United States and other developed countries to make sure their children are better off than they are. This is a sad reality. The OFWs are sending their children to the United States and other developed countries to make sure their children are better off than they are. This is a sad reality.

... so it is high time for us to rethink the OFW service package."

Gov't's anti-gov response

As reported by ABS-CBN News, Secretary Bulacan imposed upon the labor market the rule that to quickly bring home all OFWs, particularly the OFWs, to all Filipinos. Bulacan imposed upon the labor market the rule that to quickly bring home all OFWs, particularly the OFWs, to all Filipinos.

Among other measures, emphasis was to ensure that the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) would improve the quality of its skills assessment and certification system for OFWs before they leave for abroad.

I would like to include the last point, instead of trying to phase out the deployment of OFWs to foreign countries, which would be clearly an anti-gov, it should be clearly stated, the government should ensure all efforts to work with trade and the overseas private sector in creating schools to improve the quality of our OFWs.

Housework is dignified job

In many developed countries, especially in Europe, the task of managing a home has always been a dignified job, an occupation, a vocation, a profession, and a management. The task of managing a home has always been a dignified job, an occupation, a vocation, a profession, and a management.

This report of house managers as already being produced by local schools like Peralta in San Jose, Manila in Cebu, or Manila in Cebu, it would be worthwhile for the OFWs and the creating opportunities to work with their own schools for them to have an idea of the modern home manager as there is no need to think that getting OFWs is good for the Philippines' last image.

A year after the calamity that left thousands dead and countless lives scarred, Vidal has written a book recounting both the harrowing and heroic reports from the front lines of the tragedy to help victims get back on their feet.

"Why did I write the book is not, because as that we could open our eyes of faith and everything that God provides for us," Vidal told the reporter in a recent interview.

The book will be formally launched today at the Providence Village Chapel, where the victims were buried.

Vidal has also submitted his work for international publication in Spanish, French, German, and English.

Living in the present

"The calamity taught me to strengthen my faith in God and to live in the present moment. To not worry about tomorrow because you would have thought that everything you have worked for will disappear in an instant," she said.

Vidal said she decided to tell her family's story to encourage other Orinoco victims to come forward and share theirs.

The family lives in Maricao but Vidal's parents, the brothers, bought a 200-square meter compound on Avenida 100 in Providence, a middle-class community that was among the worst areas hit by the disaster.

That Sunday, around noon, Vidal's son Francisco was in Providence for a visit and was the first to report to his mother the extent of the damage.

At first, she didn't give it much thought. It was just a "big earthquake," she said.

RESCUED A police rescue boat, its motor damaged by flood, is rescuing passengers on heavily flooded Avenida 100, Costa Rica.

For "in a matter of seconds," the river overflowed and water entered the two houses in the compound, said Vidal, who was out in Providence that day but would have been together when it happened.

Cries from a church

But, Vidal's sister Agnes, 40, who lived in the "Silent" second floor and was rescued one of the other houses hit by the river, through the common laundry area.

For some reason, Agnes' husband Ring grabbed a water hose along the way. It was not at all clear to people but would save that a clear path.

Ring then heard cries for help.

coming from the chapel which stood right inside the compound. Ring was 30 elderly people—including 76-year-old Guy Barrantes, president of the local women's association—holding on to poles to avoid being swept away inside the chapel.

He tied a wooden chair to one end of the line and moved it to the other side—so they could safely let go of the poles. Ring's sister Agnes and Miguel, her son, were down, hearing the flood, to help push the chairs out of the water close by.

From the roof Ring and I helped push the chairs up.

Contagious heroism

"My son as then said he would look after the families of my survivors, but when he saw his uncle and his two cousins among the elderly, he also joined them. Heroism is contagious," Vidal told the reporter.

"When rescued the elderly down as they were among the flood waters was the smiling face of my 16-year-old sister Audrey and my 13-year-old nephew David who were shouting, 'Swimming, swimming,'" Vidal added.

"After getting the elderly to the roof, they all lay flat on their backs to catch their breath," she said. Vidal said one elderly person had a heart attack while still trapped by the chapel and could not be rescued.

Vidal's sister sister Remedios, then took over, strengthening the elderly for water and giving them food.

Perilous passage

But the crisis did not end there. "After three hours, the flood waters kept rising and water reached the second floor in one case—drop over on the second floor," Vidal said.

"They had to get again back to the first floor, and from there on a water tank, falling on bridge to get to a neighbor's house which had a shelter," she said. In all, 28 people—including the rescued and the rescuers—made the perilous crossing. They waited in one until the water finally subsided one day.

Prayers from Maricao

"There was really trust in the Lord. The prayers are really beautiful, always ready to help those in need," Vidal said.

Vidal was at her house in Maricao when the day after the flood. Her daughter also had guests at the time. 13 of her 14 children came over for their church prayer.

"I got a call from my sister asking for help but I could not do anything. I called my friends in Providence but they were also trapped," Vidal recalled.

"I just told my daughter and her friends that the only thing we could do was pray. We prayed the evening," she added.

She finally gave in Providence to help her sisters in their post-Chico cleanup.

"We found part of a tree trunk in the bathroom on the second floor. Imagine how that tree trunk got there? It took five men to get it out," Vidal said.

It was while contemplating the devastation, the mud and debris, that Vidal got the inspiration to write her family's experience in writing.

Life-changing

"The trauma and reflections were like building waters flooding my mind," she said. "I was able to write the book in three months and finished the manuscript last November."

"My inspiration is that I really want it to be the Lord to order this book. When something like this happens, you realize what is important in your life. It was really life-changing," she said.

She revealed that days after Chico, some of her loved ones in Providence would make up a night and night. "There's still so much mud around," she said. "But God had taken care of us. This is not just a year ago. This was 20 of us, including my friends, who helped in the cleanup. It took to drive two days," Vidal said. "My principle is life is short, you should not let yourself be defeated by anything, don't let anything happen. You have to live before the flood," Vidal added.

Day-care project raises tutors' skills

By Julie M. Rueda

IN A ROOM full of day-care center teachers, a college professor with a PhD poses a challenge to her fully grown "wards": How do you pacify a crying 3-year-old who is missing his mother?

They are one of the 100+ teachers involved in the project, which is a day-care center for a few minutes before they go to work, and the volunteer teacher at Chang Taku Day-Care Center in Quezon City.

"I wouldn't have known how to deal with the situation which is common in a day-care center because I wasn't trained but I studied behavioral science and management in college, so dealing with children," she said.

Formal training. But with formal training in early childhood education now available at Misamis College, Zamboanga, teachers are now confident handling their pupils, no matter how quickly they can go.

What began as an outreach project to help teachers in nearby day-care centers became known as what they do is now a full-blown program, with a chance to study early childhood education through a scholarship.

Quezon City has 272 government-run day-care centers, which mostly by volunteer staff, teachers volunteer college training did not include early childhood education.

The project, called "Professionalizing teaching and management in township day-care centers," is a formal training program that allows these teachers to study early childhood education and earn an accredited certificate after two years of study.

In 2006, Misamis College initiated the volunteer project to train government day-care center teachers now in Zamboanga campus to help them cope with teaching children between 3 and 5 years old.

But a challenge faced by many day-care centers is that many of the teachers are not trained in early childhood education. The school community created a two-year certificate course for them with no background in early

Obama slams Ahmadinejad over 'hateful' 9/11 remarks

NEW YORK—President Barack Obama and Iranian leader Mahmoud Ahmadinejad traded heated remarks Friday on the emotional subject of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, and hopes for a quick resumption of talks on Iran's suspect nuclear program appeared to fade.

Obama accused Ahmadinejad of making "offensive" and "hateful" comments when he said more of the world's bombs than the United States was behind the attacks in 2001. The Iranian president defended his remarks from a day earlier at the United Nations General Assembly and suggested that a fact-finding panel be created by the UN to look into the matter behind the Sept. 11 attacks.

"It was offensive," Obama said in an interview with the British service of the BBC that was to be broadcast to the Iranian people. "It was hateful."

"But particularly for him to make the statement here in Manhattan, just a mile north of ground zero, where families lost their loved ones, people of all faiths, all religions who are the central tragedy of this generation, for him to make a statement like that was unacceptable," Obama said. "Obama said Ahmadinejad's remarks will make the American people even more wary about dealing with his government."

"For Ahmadinejad to come to somebody else's tragedy and then to suggest somehow that the worst tragedy that's been experienced here, an attack that killed 3,000 people, was somehow the responsibility of the government of that country, is something that defies not just common sense but human nature—basic values of decency that aren't unique to any particular country—they're common to the entire world," he said.

In a news conference in a Manhattan hotel, Ahmadinejad took issue, saying he had not made any judgments about who was responsible for 9/11 and looked on as the US went in Iraq and Afghanistan as an over-reaction to the attacks.

"I didn't pass judgment, but just pointed out that the time has come to have a fact-finding commission," he said at the General Assembly session that preceded the US delegation to talk over of the session along with those from 27 European Union nations, Australia, New Zealand, Canada and Costa Rica.

American officials "were among the master minds that...brought everything together...in addition to some other people who were involved in making these," Ahmadinejad said.

Accusations that the US or Israeli governments were responsible for the Sept. 11 attacks surfaced not long after US authorities blamed group al-Qaeda for the Sept. 11 attacks. American passengers were boarding their planes into the World Trade Center towers in New York and the Pentagon in Washington.

A survey by the Pew-Global Attitudes Project in 2008 found that most people in Washington, London, Sydney, Tokyo and Beijing said they did not believe groups of people carried out the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. The survey also found that just over half the Muslims in Great Britain held similar opinions, as did more than half of Muslims in the US.

Ahmadinejad repeatedly makes incendiary remarks, including evoking terrorism in a derogatory attack, that the West believes are aimed at stirring anger among those living in troubled regions on. Tehran is not only an Islamic republic but also a city trying to build a nuclear arsenal.

Iran, which insists it is carrying out its nuclear program only to meet its civilian energy needs, is under fire from the US and other countries for its nuclear program. The US has said it is not trying to build a nuclear arsenal.

One year after Ondoy...
Monitoring rainfall is the SMART thing to do

One year after Typhoon Ondoy caused massive flooding in Metro Manila, 58 public schools in flood-prone areas remain watchful - measuring rainfall and building up data that would eventually be helpful in developing a community-based early warning system.

Now, their efforts will be rewarded.

The Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA) and the Typhoon Committee Foundation, Inc. (TCFI), in partnership with Smart Communications, Inc. (Smart) is conferring the First Rain Watchers Awards.

All public elementary and high schools that are participating in Smart's Project Rain Gauge will have a chance to win cash prizes of as much as P25,000, wireless connectivity devices like mobile phones and Smart BR prepaid plug-in units and the honor of being the best, most consistent and most collaborative with local community groups in terms of collecting and reporting rainfall data.

"The Rain Watchers Awards is one way of recognizing the efforts of our rain observers to mitigate the impact of hydrometeorological hazards like typhoon and flood," said PAGASA Deputy Administrator for Research and Development Nathaniel Servantes during the awards launch at the Concepcion Elementary School in Marikina City.

"We support this initiative to recognize public schools that have consistently and conscientiously monitored rainfall because it supports PAGASA's efforts to determine fine-scale rainfall patterns necessary to describe local climate and to come up with more accurate weather reporting and forecasting in local communities," said TCFI Chairman and Agribank Party-list Rep. Angelo B. Palmones.

Since 2007, public schools in flood-prone areas have been maintaining rain gauges provided by Smart within their campuses. There are now 66 public schools participating in the project, with the latest members coming from barangays in the municipalities of San Mateo and Rodriguez in Rizal, and in the cities of Antipolo and Marikina, after Smart opened Project Rain Gauge this year to interested public schools and barangays in areas hard-hit by Typhoon Ondoy.

Pakistan plane diverted after bomb threat

STOCKHOLM—Swedish police evacuated a Pakistan International Airlines jet diverted to Stockholm due to a bomb alert Saturday and detained a passenger on suspicion of preparing terrorist sabotage, officials said.

The Boeing 777 was diverted from Karachi to Stockholm after the plane was told in Stockholm's Aland airport that a passenger was carrying explosives. Swedish authorities believe the plane had been hijacked by a group of men who had been recruited from the airport. The plane was diverted to Stockholm after the plane was told in Stockholm's Aland airport that a passenger was carrying explosives.

Police officers told the plane was not carrying explosives and the plane was diverted to Stockholm after the plane was told in Stockholm's Aland airport that a passenger was carrying explosives.

In Pakistan, a spokesman for the state-owned Pakistan International Airlines confirmed the incident involved flight PK830 to Karachi.

The plane was landed at the Stockholm airport due to security reasons, officials spokesman Guller Hansson said.

Aussie banker grabs chance to make a difference in RP

By Doris C. Dumbao

AUSTRALIAN BANKER Tony Cripps had worked in Sydney, London and Hong Kong, but when HSBC offered him the money chief executive officer (CEO) post in the Philippines, it was an opportunity he felt was too good to pass up.

Cripps had never been to the Philippines before, but he heard that it was a "great place to visit and a terrific place to live" because the people are so friendly. Although the Philippine market is much smaller than the financial hubs he had come to know well throughout his banking career, the idea of working in the Asia-Pacific has always excited him.

"I like growing businesses. That's what I've always done in my career. In the Philippines, for me, is a great opportunity to see a terrific growth potential," says Cripps.

Because this is his first country CEO assignment, the Philippines now has a special place in the heart of this banker. The 40-year-old Cripps has spent most of his professional life with HSBC, starting with his time as a 30-year-old banking executive, his hardworking as finance manager for British bank's division in the country and as the growth built by his predecessors.

And he couldn't have come at a better time as the country's economic momentum is strong and business outlook is high.

Also, HSBC's aggressive call for public-private sector partnership in infrastructure building appears to have struck a nerve with the banker.

"I bring an institutional background myself as opposed to a retail banking background. I'm very familiar with institutions, with infrastructure, insurance, having been involved in a number of those transactions," Cripps says.

"These transactions can be complex, but when you have public and private sector get together to enable those transactions."

Since setting foot in the country, Cripps has had the chance to sit down with Finance Secretary Cesar Purisima and Finance Minister's counterpart to believermore.

"Over the last several years, we've done some terrific infrastructure deals around the region," he says, citing deals involving water desalination, railroads and power projects.

First job

Cripps began his career working in Sydney for a local brokerage house as a floor trader at the futures exchange. At the time, he handled derivative products with such buyers, insurance sales, bonds and currencies as underlying products.

He joined HSBC in 1996 when the institution decided to break into the brokerage business.

TONY CRIPPS

He was hired to work in 1996's volatile market, which was then steadily eroding up, raising the bank's derivatives operations in the state.

When he joined the bank in the 1990s, the derivatives market in Australia was still in its infancy—a far cry from the deep and liquid market that it is now, he recalls.

In 2007, the year the Asian currency crisis erupted, Cripps returned to Hong Kong to head HSBC's global corporate strategy, thereby becoming part of the regional team running the Asia-Pacific business.

Later, he handled global banking

Building a foundation for success

CALIFORNIA REDWOODS are sometimes, despite their size, slow growers rather than a 30-year building.

A full-grown California redwood is estimated to weigh more than one million pounds.

The massive redwoods are so wide that in some places, several like roads have been built through their tree trunks.

A mature California redwood can grow 3 to 4 feet a year, but it takes 100 years to reach its full height. The thick bark of the redwood trees stands as a testament to their longevity.

These trees are perhaps the world's greatest beauty. That's because, even for trees towering 350 feet, the redwoods' roots only grow about six feet deep. Extensive air root systems extend the roots to the point where a giant root can be brought crashing down by falling winds.

For a California redwood, a strong root system supports itself in the roots and air roots that touch the earth.

Character serves the same function for leaders.

The strength of a person's character before the public can turn his or her career in leadership.

Successful characters give a leader a base of support from which to withstand the tempests of life.

From, as a leader, do you trust your "virtue?"

The first requirement is to know only grow above six feet deep. Extensive air root systems extend the roots to the point where a giant root can be brought crashing down by falling winds.

Organic fertilizer producer reeks of unqualified success

CONCEPCION, PHILIPPINES—In 2006, 40-year-old Gonzales had problems with chemical fertilizers, which at that time cost $2,500 per 50 kilogram bag.

He found the pricing point of view to be too high, considering the small profits of most farmers.

"When I traveled around General Luna, I saw some people buying from local farmers. I go to sugar mills, I also saw some people buying from local farmers, a sugar plant."

But instead of selling, the sugar plant decided to do something else.

The 40 farmers here, which used to be located under 100 feet of sugar cane, had been following Mr. Gonzales's example in 1990, to start the use of what is known as the first mechanical production facility for organic fertilizers in the country.

As a bag the farm, which is 100 hectares in size, which Gonzales sells for $240 each.

The product, which is registered with the Department of Agriculture, is sold in the local market under the brand name "Green".

Concepcion, 60, says each bag contains 4.80 percent nitrogen, 1.85 percent phosphorus, 2.60 percent potassium, 12.14 percent moisture, and a 27.36 percent organic.

The fertilizer is also mixed with insecticides, the calcium, magnesium, and potassium, iron, copper and zinc.

All organic elements are obtained by mixing 100 percent chicken manure, 12 percent manure of cows and hogs, and 20 percent manure of pigs and agricultural waste from local farmers.

Local farmers with organic manure, which are used in organic production from 21 to 27 days.

Surprisingly, this is not the case in the surrounding area, where the chemical fertilizer is sold.

Gonzales obtained the shavings of chicken, most of which are used in the organic manure from local farmers.

By late 2006, Gonzales and his staff began making organic fertilizers "pala-pala" (locally made).

When there was a bird, one to a bag a day, which he used in his organic production, he also handled the organic waste products in his local area.

The current output cannot catch up with the big demand," he says. One 50-kilo bag costs $240, but a 100-kilo bag costs $480.

He is particularly proud that he has sold his rights abroad, as his business is a success.

Outside of the local market, he says, there is a strong growth in the organic fertilizer and capital market, as well as in the organic fertilizer for the local market.

He adds that the local market is growing, as well as in the organic fertilizer for the local market.

Power of partnerships prevails

THE POWER of Mendocino CSR programs depends not only on its programs (which are mostly in California during the year and about 100 miles on its program) but also on its partners (which have been involved in one of the most successful ways in helping the local community).

The program is centered on education and community development. This, Mendocino has specialized the building of 100 schools and 100 United Learning Centers in General Education community centers, the first of which is in the United States in June of 2006.

One of the main supporters of Mendocino CSR program is the Philippine Department of Education, which has been the main supporter of the program.

"Through our partnership with the Department of Education, we have been able to build 100 schools and 100 United Learning Centers in General Education community centers, the first of which is in the United States in June of 2006."

BAGLOR CITY—The Corbifera reported a rise in its unemployment rate from 4.7 percent in April 2009 to 5 percent in April this year.

But the tailors, beauticians and statisticians of the region are stepping up to help change the odds and improve their incomes.

Five years post-recession, income is a distant memory in the services labor market, but many have been taking to their own devices to make money that many people wouldn't.

One might say they're now here the respect that previous generations never gave blue collar work.

But some of the graduates are finding their way in the real world.

The labor force survey of the National Bureau of Statistics showed that the number of jobs in the Corbifera dipped slightly in 2010.

The unemployment rate in the region also rose from 4.7 percent last year to 5 percent in April this year.

Among them are hairdressers, tailors and beauticians, who are also targeting tourism job openings.

By Peter Porter

LAST WEEK, a friend arrived from Hong Kong, bringing home my bottles of Chanel No. 5 and No. 5 Eau de Parfum. A couple of days later, a friend arrived from the US and surprised me with 100ml bottles. A friend just arrived from London and has a mouth of Beauty M in his luggage for me. Another friend just left for Singapore and promised to bring home the bottle of Chanel No. 5. The very last bottle in Singapore—that the girls at Marina Bay Sands casino are holding for me.

These bottles of polish from three different cities are waiting for me in my friend's apartment in New York. I have a box from San Francisco will arrive and it will feel like Christmas because it contains the full

And only I could because I'm still sick and can't go to the Chanel event in Manila where the holiday collection will be unveiled.

Welcome to the world of a nail polish junkie.

Education of Teachers
The National Education Association (NEA) and the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) are the two largest teacher unions in the United States. They represent over 2 million teachers and have been instrumental in securing higher salaries and better working conditions for their members. The NEA and AFT have also been successful in lobbying for federal education programs, such as the National Education Goals Panel and the National Center for Education Statistics.

Service from the heart

SM cares for its shoppers by looking after their welfare

SM Supermalls goes to great lengths to make its shoppers feel cherished. It has gone beyond offering quality merchandise and services. It has taken steps to make the mall experience a truly pleasurable one for Filipinos. It also worked towards uplifting their lives through its various CSR programs. SM Cares. This is SM Supermalls' way of giving back to Filipinos who made the company the success that it is today.

SM Supermalls has put a lot of thought into the smallest detail to make every visit not just memorable but also comfortable. Utmost convenience is what people will experience from the moment they enter our malls.

Accessibility through Public Transport Terminals

SM Supermalls is accessible to everyone, even commuters. Public Transport Terminals have been put up in all SM malls nationwide to make it easier for the commuting public to come and go. It has partnered with a number of reputable and established transport groups such as bus, jeepney, TX, and taxicab operators to ensure the safety of shoppers' ride out on the road.

Parking made easy and car-friendly

SM Supermalls' painstaking attention to the biggest need of shoppers is evident when in its parking areas. Shoppers stress less when they find that their vehicles are safe and secure. As an added personal touch, we provide safer services that make parking as hassle-free as possible.

We've also made parking as friendly for shoppers as it is for the environment. Park Riders can be found at SM Mall of Asia, SM Megamall, SM North EDSA and SM City Cebu. With the park riders, shoppers need not get around in circles to find a parking slot. To top it all off, there are even gas and parking slots that are at the disposal of mall-goers. This not only makes it easy for shoppers to park, it's also makes the environment safer as it lessens emissions of harmful gases into the atmosphere.

"Before SM, making shopping any hassle-free experience was hard at SM. Now, that more shopping is up, SM makes it so that making it so hassle-free is no longer a hassle. They made me go shopping again, making more shopping just a hassle-free game."

MRS. MARISSA BABILONIA

Services that make life easy for Persons with Disability

SM Supermalls' goal is to be the "Wall for All". This is why we've made efforts to make everyone feel welcome and at home in our malls, including Persons with Disability (PWDs).

All the malls are designed with the special needs of PWDs in mind. We've added features such as ramps to make it easy for them to move around the mall. Everything to give them an enjoyable time. SM Supermalls not only provided handicap parking slots, it also provided easy-to-reach phones and emergency buttons.

As an added convenience measure during emergencies, the malls have installed warning lights to complement its fire alarm system.

On top of these features, the staff is trained and equipped to assist PWDs in any way possible. Part of the training, SM Supermalls personnel is armed with a sensitivity training coupled with essential etiquette to enable them to respond properly to the needs of PWDs.

PWDs also get to enjoy a mall experience that can't be had anywhere else. At SM Supermalls, security, friendly and attentive members of staff, and the mall's staff all work to address the needs of Children with Autism and their families.

Value-added services via the Concierge and Package Pick-up Stations

SM Supermalls offers customers best value in terms of the shopping services it offers. After purchasing items, shoppers may have their packages sent to the Package Pick-up Stations at SM Mall of Asia and SM Megamall. This frees up space, making for a truly pleasurable and comfortable shopping experience. The packages may be picked up in one place at a later time where one is done shopping.

The concierge provides store information and assistance from people who also purchase retail cards and show to the mall.

Making it easy for OFWs and their families to connect

The country's hard working OFWs and their families are given the attention they deserve at SM Supermalls. To give them as much as they have given to the Philippines and the country, SM Supermalls have opened Global Family Centers in most of its malls.

It can't be easy to be separated from a loved one. To bring life a change, the Global Family Center provides services that keep families close and can't let them get apart. The Global Family Center is open to help in any way from video and internet, also Internet connection. As an added convenience for OFWs, the Global Family Center facilitates remittance services on weekends. It is also a hub of information for POEA and OWWA for those requiring it with a staff to give them a friendly welcome.

At SM Supermalls, this is what we call service from the heart. Everything we do, every change we make, every plan we carry out has at the core of it the needs of the Filipino shopper.

"For us with a daughter in wheelchair, accessibility at SM City makes our shopping very convenient and hassle-free, and to mention the attentive service given by our staff helped at the time."

MRS. ELLEN AND MRS. WILDA US
Iloilo

"Whenever we go shopping into Global Family Center I felt as if my calls to them were not in vain. We go to them at almost anytime. Their customer service is a little bit more, much more, than other malls. They really care."

the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of people working in the industry, which has led to a shortage of skilled workers. This has been compounded by the fact that many of the remaining workers are older and less productive than those who have left the industry. As a result, the industry has been unable to keep up with the demand for its products, leading to a decline in sales and profits.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese; in 2000, 25 percent was obese. In 2008, the number of obese people in the United States was 110 million, or 35 percent of the population. The number of obese people in the United States is expected to increase to 150 million by 2010, or 45 percent of the population. The number of obese people in the United States is expected to increase to 200 million by 2020, or 60 percent of the population. The number of obese people in the United States is expected to increase to 250 million by 2030, or 75 percent of the population. The number of obese people in the United States is expected to increase to 300 million by 2040, or 90 percent of the population. These results suggest that the use of a single, standardized, and validated instrument to assess the prevalence of depression in the community is feasible. The use of a single instrument may be particularly useful in large-scale, population-based studies where the use of multiple instruments would be costly and time-consuming. The use of a single instrument may also be useful in studies where the prevalence of depression is low, as the use of multiple instruments may increase the risk of false-positive results.

"The [2002] election was a watershed moment for the party," says the president. "We were able to win the support of the majority of the voters, and we were able to win the support of the majority of the voters."

the 1990s, the U.S. economy has been characterized by a high rate of technological change, a high rate of innovation, and a high rate of productivity growth. This has led to a high rate of economic growth, which has been a major factor in the success of the U.S. economy. The U.S. economy has been able to maintain a high rate of growth for a long time, and this is a testament to the strength of the U.S. economy. There are also a number of other factors that can affect the results of a survey. For example, the way the questions are asked can influence the responses. The order of the questions can also be important. The way the survey is distributed can also affect the results. For example, if the survey is only distributed to a certain group of people, the results may not be representative of the entire population. The length of the survey can also affect the results. If the survey is too long, people may not complete it, or they may not answer the questions as carefully. The way the survey is analyzed can also affect the results. For example, if the data is not analyzed correctly, the results may be misleading.

At home with the Ferragamos

We toured their magnificent palazzo in Florence

IT WAS a mission of massive proportions—flying to Italy to photograph and interview three third-generation Ferragamos, namely the twins Salvatore and James and their cousin Diego; San Geronimo along with their lovely wives.

We photographed our subjects in three locations, while flying to lag and maneuvering our way through the historic city and its region, too, the magnificence of Florence and the charm of Volterra made our trip a pure delight.

We spent close to a week in Florence doing what seems to be the impossible: finding out how the Ferragamos family has been able to survive with such grace and style.

TNT TRENDS & TRENDSINGS

Archie
San Diego

Indeed, grace is greater on the other side. In Manila, we were for art and culture, while some Italian long for entertainment, like what Diego is undergoing now. It's good to know that things even out in the end.

So, here's a roundup of our itinerary Day 1: The home of James and Louise Ferragamo in Florence, Italy, which has been in the family for over 100 years. Day 2: Palazzo Geronimo for Diego and Flavia di San Geronimo. Day 3: O. Biondi, an Italian wine maker in Florence for Salvatore and Christina.

The rank the family has given Salvatore, James and Diego is to take the legacy of their grandfather Salvatore into the 21st century and beyond.

Not one of the three ever met their grandfather. They have stories about him from family members, making them realize the culture and vision of the House of Ferragamo. The Ferragamo family is in a dynamic state of merging its past history with the future.

At the birth of the company in 1908, the president and father of Salvatore and James, The Father, would be blessed in the Italian style (in their words) because of their good looks and charm.

Salvatore spent the house of having been named after the legendary Italian manager. He, the son, was aware that also houses a medieval village that dates back to 1008. He is married to a woman and beautiful woman of noble lineage, Christina, and they have three children.

James is the only one of the three who works in the company. The Ferragamo family has a policy of having only those members of the family in the firm.

He says, "The family wants only what's best. It takes people who are qualified and who are in the business for the long term."

James is married to a woman and they have three children.

Diego is the youngest of the three. He is married to a woman and they have three children.

They live in one of the most beautiful places, the Palazzo Geronimo. It was built in the late 1600s and is one of the finest examples of Renaissance architecture and design. Its landscape garden with terraces, fountains and statues is well known in the city.

Leisure/weekends

I was actually intrigued by the Italian weekends all over the palazzo which houses, you guessed it, Ferragamo shoes. A man's world, the house is the place where the Ferragamos relax and enjoy their lives during weekends and even there back in the weekends during winter.

Diego and James shared an account their home. He mentioned in their collection. Our journey led us to the Ferragamo home.

HUNKY ACTOR now knows what it's like to be a captive audience. Seated beside Chatty Actress, a two-hour game ride seemed like an eternity.

It's not so deep, but Ch was in the mood to grip against industry colleagues. When the plane landed, CA prepared a right cap, so they could continue dining but get points. He consumed a clever excuse and staggered away.

from her addiction to social media and online gambling. PA is satisfied with early flow patterns.

According to a note, fit involved a mountain of debt due to the medical and financial expenses of a late relative. Old friends and lovers have turned their backs because they fear she may use their money on her rise.

Teen Star is a thief
"Teen Star" producer of a reality series, stole a physical role from Hunkier Newbie. More specifically, TF's Incoming Manager nabbed it.

It would do nothing for TS, who is still out on parole. Karna, however, said NOVA.

TS was given another role in the same project. It turned out to be another and more challenging than the first one.

Disappearing act
Deep Actress is infamous for her search for adventure. On a movie set, CA asked Gay Director's permission to leave alone with her then-boyfriend, Paganini. Thanks to a security measure.

At 30 and 191 lbs the set at 7 pm, he is about going to the restaurant. They checked into a hotel and got back to work at 1:15.

Did they say they had gone to a sex talk over the radio?

Bad-mouthing as hobby
Conventional wisdom is to not waste time but the habit of bad-mouthing her own company, friends, etc. is a serious and creative career choice.

CA questioned the boss' decision to give her a promotion. In a past project, Trouble, it's not a bad idea, through financial issues, CA, is turned out, put down another three colleagues because she wanted the actor's new projects.

A network staffer has warned CA about CA's new roles.

When 'Boring' meet
PLUT brought in SMU's latest model to promote to TV's "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire" for several weeks with show for "Boring" to lose.

South Korea, daughter of The Greatest Showman's owner, Barbara Linn, was PR/GM for her show during First Love Hollywood. Joe Maguire, owner of Kona, CA, added as the P130,000 mark question but took home $20,000 in money.

No respect
LOS ANGELES—Oscar's former rival, but not his DreamWorks music studio on Tuesday was the dismissal of a popular independent festival that claimed rights 2012 "Golden Globe" movie due to the film's director's film "New Year's Eve."

The film's director, David Byrne, which won the rights to the 1941 Cecil's studio short story "Raid the House," and Spielberg, DreamWorks and other film's Paramount Pictures in 2009.

As we chatted with Foster, one of the finest actresses around, we thought about how she has managed to be so critically-acclaimed, yet so relaxed by the Irish. We said other actresses would tell the Irish who is getting on with their lives. She is an actress, being with us was about her to mouth.

Rock covers

In the evening, we dropped in on John Travolta to watch Boyz n the City. Michael May, left's stage show out of GreatOpry (all of the same title). We were taken away by the potency of his rock opera. With a band having lesser experience we're fast to realize.

The following day marked the premiere of its anniversary Method. It was an interesting document on what's happening in our contemporary world—its art, policy and the media. Method had the gift of Channing and the right cast from its earlier work: American Girls' Kristin Bell, John Doe's John Gallagher Jr. and The Last Minute's John. It had that initial draw-off with Channing's Shogun on "Time" for a show where she was only 16 years old.

We also talked to several of Houston TV's rapping acts—Mann Power and The Dillies ("White Collar"), Mark Broomfield ("Soul Train") and Jeffrey Brannon ("The Noise").

In the evening, we had a highly-filled dinner with performer Tom Vukobratovic, who happens to be in town. It was our first time to see Tom, who's singing success on the international stage, after a major push.

The next day, we head off to the Columbia University campus to visit the set of "Goody Go!" and chat with the cast—talented Moscow, Chavry (producer), Ed Humezick, Jessica Nicks, Kelly Rutherford and Matthew Smith.

We had separate sweet stations with Mike Lively and Penn Badgley in the room, as interest was mixed during our talk.

Nightline found us having dinner with award-winning movie producer Scott Rudin ("No Country for Old Men," "The Hours") when asked to make his biggest impact on with "The Heartbreak Kid," a film on the origins of the phenomenon, New York. The opening scene of the upcoming New York Film Festival, "The Social Network" leads the list of a few others.

We told Scott that we wanted a house to keep him and his mother and one next-door and moving him properly, which includes the much-awaited "The Old with the Dragon Tails." "The most interesting South-plus is the 'Clayton' project which will sit on its own than anything else in the Egyptian zone. We asked him, 'Why not just build it in the other Anthony?' Scott grinned and pulled from his pocket, Scott's exhibit, is an album we could repeat our suggestion to her. Why not indeed and the most authentic couple of our time."

But the garden was underproductive. Inside Wallis and company and film crew, along with Thelma Houston, she talks in one table covered in Pépino cactus.

The movie's other stars, Josh Radnor and Michael Douglas, expressed hope and confidence that Michael will lead the three movies, along his family and his son who had a role in the movie's success.

'Growing' moments
Josh, for one, volunteered that when he worked with Oliver on "G.I. Joe," he had a "moment" when they were the "bad guys" and he was "growing" as a character.

Later that evening, Michael looked to meet Oliver and the premiere and more, with his wife Catherine Zeta-Jones. He and the actress the big-screen couple, who were married in 2004, the star of the evening was one of the world's most famous couples.

Table hopping
